PROFILE SUMMARY

Bosco Cole's first foray into political and community service came as a young man studying at the University of South Carolina. It was during his tenure here that he first understood how much he could help others throughout the region. With people coming from all manner of backgrounds and settings, he realized there were a lot of citizens that could benefit from his assistance. This led him to his employment as a legislative assistant where he would work with several state house members in his time here – one of which was later elected as governor. Needless to say, the experience gained here has proven invaluable for his ability to formulate strategic reform in all sectors in life.

The most influential individual who helped navigate Bosco's journey was the late Lon Day Jr, Co-Founder of Days Inn and a man that Mr. Cole is very proud to call his mentor.

MISSION

For more than 25 years he has had one simple mission – to help create an opportunity for individuals to transition back into society, no matter whom they are or where they have come from.

In particular, he has aimed to help those that others have given up on. Those with labels attached to their names due to past mistakes can struggle to integrate back into society without a little compassion, which is precisely what Bosco wants to provide: that and a little hope for the future.

We all make mistakes. Those of us that learn from them can end up becoming better off for the experience, so why should this be saved for a select few? Everyone deserves a second chance, and there is a way to look ahead through reform and accountability.

For those willing to do this, then Bosco can gladly provide a helping hand. Bosco Cole is passionate and driven to help others through the difficult moments in life.
